QUICK CONNECT USING A BROWSER

The best way to connect to your web conference class is through your web browser, especially if your internet connection is slow or you’re using a public computer.

ODU offers a Test Web Conference so you can configure your audio and video before class. This test conference is always open, so you can test your devices at any time.

1. From online.odu.edu, select Student Access, and then Class Access.

2. In the Web Conference Courses box, choose Web Conference Class Test. A new page will open. This is similar to what your course launch page will look like.

3. Click the login button, and enter your MIDAS ID and password.

4. To connect to the test, choose Click to Join.

5. Fill in your full name and email address. Then hover over the down arrow on the green button. Choose Join from Web App.

6. Click Join Meeting. The web conference will load in your current browser.

7. In the pop up box in the middle, choose your video and audio sources.

   Your browser may ask permission to access a webcam and microphone. If it does, click allow.

8. Once you have chosen your sources, click Connect Audio and Start Video.

You should now see a slide show of pictures from ODU's campus and hear music in the background. If you don't hear the music, check that your volume is up and that your sound isn't muted.
